- So much for getting into "the zone" and writing some god damn code...!
- There goes my productivity again, out the window...
- I bet I could write a program to open that door for me...
- They wonder why the sprint always fails, this is why...
- My code is compiling, this doesn't mean I have time for opening doors.
- I could write better story tickets or open the door. Which one will it be?
- All the bugs in my code are due to Doorbell Interruptus
- Could we have a manager opening the door, this time?
- Just put on the headphones and pretend I didn't hear that doorbell...
- Headphones: ON, doorbell: IGNORE

Motivating Manager

Obnoxiously cheerful and motivatingly positive.

- All right, team, this is the pizza I promised you!
- Ooooo, more team members, arriving! The more, the merrier [lower voice, sidenote] (and the faster we finish that sprint)!
- The developer who opens the door, gets five story points! It's like Hogwarts, but with Jira!
- Mihkel, the team agreed to nominate you to be the dedicated door-man! What an honor!
- Now, now, don't ALL get up at once to get the door!
- [excited laughter] A doorbell! Who could it possibly be?
- A doorbell! This might be a package from Amazon!

Creepy Stalker Guy

Menacing, mysterious, scheming.

- Another victim arrives... [evil laugh]
- He might come in... but will he be able to leave?
- It was morning when she arrived to the office. It will be night, when she leaves... I'm just kidding, she won't leave... at all! [evil laugh]
- That door has a peephole for a reason... you never know, who's behind it.
- We have the best bait: we pretend we are a legitimate office. The victims just keep on coming.
- Whoever comes through that door, I will make them read our Jira tickets until they weep.
